No. 4 in succession line met with No. 5 ahead of Friday rally

By Norberto D. Barredo

SENATOR PROSPERO NARVALO AND Supreme Court Chief Justice Sergio C. Reyes met with the country's political situation today to discuss the latest developments in the administration of President Macapagal-Arroyo's term in Makati City on Friday.

Narvalo said he and Reyes talked the political situation in two hours. Philippine provisions remained solid for the Arroyo to resign and civil society groups organized protests in the wake of the 275,000 congressional vote.

'Worth observing'

"We both jointly discussed the political situation and both jointly expressed concern about it as it affects our role as Filipino leaders today," Narvalo said in a text message to the Inquirer.

"The current political scene is worth observing very closely as it will impact it all on our nation's future. We are all concerned with that," he added.

Narvalo expressed concern that the increase in political pressure would have some effect on the economy.

"There is no much political noise and this will ensure some economic backlash," Narvalo said.

Courtship call

He expressed doubt that those who are asking for the Arroyo's resignation would make it to the long run.

"They appear to be in a hurry, but I know they will fight it out until the very end, especially in the end," he said.

Narvalo met with Reyes for breakfast at the Diamond Hotel in Manila on Friday. He, however, turned to digest any speculation that would arise from their meeting as a time the political situation appeared volatile.

Narvalo said his meeting with Reyes was primarily a courtesy call on the head of the judiciary.

"It was nothing political or tactical," Narvalo said.

A declaration of martial law under the Constitution requires congressional approval.

'Not allowed'

Narvalo said he and Reyes were skipped any discussion about Executive Order No. 464 and its revocation as proposed by the Catholic Bishops' Conference of the Philippines.

"I can't take up with the Chief Justice's statement that anything is long to be brought before the Supreme Court because that is not allowed among lawyers," Narvalo said.

Narvalo, nonetheless, said that EO 464 may be done away with as the Supreme Court is in a position to exercise prerogative defined when they are covered by the privilege in congressional inquiries.

He added, "I'm looking into whether it can be moved the EO."

Dodging invitations

EO 464 bars members of the executive branch from appearing in congressional inquiries without the consent of the President.

The EO has been cited by government officials in dodging invitations to Congress to appear as its investigators.

Both Narvalo and Reyes, because of their posts in the government, are in the constitutional line of succession if the presidency becomes vacant. Narvalo is fourth in line while Reyes is fifth.

Narvalo also said he and the Chief Justice discussed the needs of the judiciary in terms of budget support and legislation.

"We also discussed the issue of the rule and order books, especially in Mindanao where I come from, and the new judicial legislative executive development council," Narvalo said.

Protesters took it out on fun wall

GMA image on streamer bore brunt of Makati ralliers' anger

By Arlene Papa

ANTAGONISTIC PROTESTERS found a new way to express their disgust with the present administration during last Friday's rally in Makati. They set up a "tubogap" wall and plastered it with photos of President Macapagal-Arroyo and her allies, much to the amusement of the demonstration and by-standers.

"Tubogap" is an old Cebuano punjabi (and would) and when a person is angry, A rumanian in Cebuano, Tubog, took the word to a new level when it set up a "tubogap" wall where rumanian can reduce their anger and nerves by beating photos on the wall.

Instant hit

But the "tubogap" wall in last Friday's rally was actually just a newspaper photo tied to a streamer eventually collapsed because of the show, protesters let out another loud cheer and started stamping on the poster.

Mood turned serious

"Today is not (Mac's) still alive," one male protester screamed as he put his face down on the image of Macapagal.

The mood turned serious for a while when the protesters started 278 schools. When they saw the image of President Macapagal, they started shouting "North, North, North," the protesters shouted, in reference to the alleged involvement of the President's father, Justice Speaker Jose de Venecia, in another controversial deal.

The protesters' anger was eventually expressed and the "tubogap" was started all over again.

P6-B UP-based IT park first of its kind in RP at science in the forefront of their respective fields, who will seek more interaction with university scientists," he said.

Eventually, Alonso said, UP graduate students could join the research projects of the Institute, say in small-scale development, computer animation and program design.

"There is still a lot of potential employment opportunities for our new graduates," he said.

Exposure to industry

Mr. Carlos Ibarra, senior director manager of AGS, an IT power business group, agreed with Alonso.

"It offers to become a training library for the academic institutions will be exposed to the industry through knowledge and the faculty through contact with industry," he said.

"It might be that some business schools will be able to bridge the students and the industry."

But that is one step of the long-term opportunities that the park will offer for the academic institutions will be exposed to the industry through knowledge and the faculty through contact with industry."

It has been in the UP-based IT park, which will be offering computer IT programs from the Philippines, as well as software development, Alonso said.

It is a big step for the UP-based IT park, which will be offering computer IT programs from the Philippines, as well as software development, Alonso said.

THE P6-B UP-based IT park is a joint venture between the UP and BPO (Business Process Outsourcing) multinational companies.

for many of IT companies in the park's BPO offices.

The BPO building, to be called "P6-B", will house software development, computer training, specialty services, computer services and banks, among others, that will serve the industry's ecosystem and staff, and

UP faculty and students.

Alonso also pointed to the construction of low-rise residential buildings for the park employees and UP faculty and students, and a three-story building for the business.

There will be 30-office buildings for the location, plus the BPO offices, the construction of an buildings is a full swing.

Like a campus

Because its design evolved from UP's concept of a campus plan, the UP-based IT park will be a "campus" in which green spaces will be integrated which means, Alonso said, that the academics, students, specialty services, business services and banks, as well as the hotel and residential buildings, would serve as support components for the academic institutions.

"It's just support for students to do their work," he said.

But if there are problems that will arise, we shall be ready to respond and attending to them."

The UP park is only the first of a three-phase development plan of the UP administration, which will be a "campus" in which green spaces will be integrated Alonso explained that the academics, students, specialty services, business services and banks, as well as the hotel and residential buildings, would serve as support components for the academic institutions.

"It's just support for students to do their work," he said.

Singular press release

With the Chief Executive taking the weekend off, the presidential news desk churned out a singular press release yesterday at 2 p.m.—it was nothing to do with the Malibuan Palace.

The press release said the President had declared March 30 a special working day in Malibuan, the Malibuan Palace administration building, to mark the Malibuan Palace's 10th anniversary.

Camp Crime

With the possibility that the Malibuan Palace could take on a life of its own and eventually become Malibuan Palace, the President had declared Camp Crime as a law.

Each day, the huge tented structure, appearing in a short trip to the Malibuan Palace and attending the inauguration of private and government officials.

But before returning to Malibuan, the President stopped at Camp Crime for an uncheduled meeting with police and military officials.

He said he was going to the Malibuan Palace to attend the inauguration of private and government officials.

FUNERAL MARCH Personal relatives the bodies of the flight instructor and his student pilot who died after their light plane plummeted to the ground in Bulacan, Bulacan.

Flight instructor, pupil killed in Bulacan light plane crash

PLASEN, BULACAN—A FILIPINO PILOT and his Indian flying student were killed yesterday when their light plane crashed into an irrigation canal near the town's airport in a tragedy experts point out.

Sector 100, Victor Bernabe, airport police chief of the town, identified those killed as Capt. Mike Bernabe and Khalid Moham, 38, an Indian national. They were affiliated with Philippine Aviation School based in Marikina.

Bernabe said the victims' bodies took off from the Marikina airport at 10:40 a.m. but crashed five minutes later about a kilometer from the runway.

Bernabe's Carera, 41, said she was wearing clothes similar but from a Bulacan Agency where she and her husband own a new similar outfit from the plane before it crashed some seven meters from the runway.

She was on the ground when she reported that the crash.

Officials of the Air Transportation Office in the town have yet to release an incident report, saying they were still investigating the crash.

In July last year, two Indians and a Filipino flight instructor were killed when their Cessna 441 crashed in Marikina, Marikina City, City of Marikina.

Both planes had taken off from the Marikina airport and were bound for Marikina, Marikina City, City of Marikina.

OFWs call for ouster of US troops from RP, Japan after alleged rape

By Jerome Baring

OVERSEAS FILIPINO WORKER groups in Hong Kong and the Middle East yesterday hit their support to the Filipino women allegedly raped by a United States serviceman in Japan last month, as they called for the pullout of US troops from both Japan and the Philippines.

United Filipinos in Hong Kong and Singapore Middle East expressed their solidarity with Japanese citizens who want the US military bases removed from Japan.

The two groups said US forces conducting military exercises with Filipino troops in the Philippines should also be withdrawn from the country to prevent any recurrence of rape and other forms of abuse.

The rape of a Filipino citizen alleged whether it is a gross crime that deserves the maximum sentence of all-around Filipinos.

The rape of a woman is just one where US troops are present and have a foothold in a part of the US troops in one country. We fully support the victims' search for justice for it is also our right," said the Philippine Federation said in a statement.

"We strongly condemn in the strongest terms this atrocious act committed by US military personnel who, after the crime, have been arrested, can easily and easily leave Japan with our paying for the crime," said the Philippine Federation.

Both groups would hold the American and Japanese governments, as well as the Philippine government, accountable "if justice is delayed or denied."

The Department of Foreign Affairs had earlier confirmed the rape of a woman accused of rape in Japan. Japanese media have also reported on the rape of a woman by a US soldier in Japan.

Malaysia said the US presence in the Asia-Pacific region was principally meant to keep an eye on China's rise and to keep US forces in the Philippines made the country a fully-fledged member of a North Atlantic alliance if the alliance broke up.

Bullheads, for her part, called the alleged rape a "test" of President Macapagal-Arroyo's sincerity in helping Japan's recovery.

She demanded the government "immediately pursue justice" for the victim.

Leyte placed under state of calamity due to floods

By Jay A. Gubina
Cebu City

MANILA CITY—THE LEYTE provincial board has placed the entire province under a state of calamity in the wake of severe flooding that caused "significant damage" to infrastructure and crops.

The flooding, caused by relentless rain for almost two weeks in February, killed four persons in the province and damaged at least P200 million worth of crops and infrastructure.

"Leyte has suffered enormous damage due to the flooding. In fact, 25 of our towns (and) 100,000 suffered most because of this incident," Vice Gov. Maricela Regalado said.

Regalado, who presides over the provincial board, said the board's decision to place the province under a state of calamity was based on the recommendation of the Provincial Disaster Coordinating Council (PDCC).

The PDCC reported on Feb. 28 that the floods destroyed P6.77 million worth of agricultural crops, P1.7 million worth of infrastructure, and caused damage to roads and bridges worth P100.36 million.

Regalado said the PDCC recommended the state of calamity cover the entire province even if only 25 towns were severely affected by the flooding since the remaining towns and cities also sustained damage. Leyte has 40 towns and three cities—Baybay, Ormoc, and Tacloban.

With the declaration of a state of calamity, Leyte could now expect assistance from the national government, the vice

Nun finds 'right place' among women in crisis

By Ma. Cecilia Rodriguez
Cagayan de Oro City

YES, I AM," SR. DIONE Cabanog, candidly admits when asked if she considers herself an activist. "Being one in my vocation for doing my duties as a servant of God and people. Activism gave me a perspective."

The 33-year-old nun is a coordinator for the outreach program of the Daughters of the Good Shepherd congregation based in Cagayan de Oro City.

Known for focusing on the needs of prisoners, the 8000 program offers social and spiritual assistance to women in crime or women victims of domestic violence, incest and rape. And yes, Sister Dione admits, "the provisioned women, who are most disadvantaged."

Victims of exploitation

In a 2006 study conducted by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), 80 percent of the 400,000 women in prostitution were victims of human rights abuses before their abduction. The remaining 20 percent were forced into prostitution due to unemployment or extreme poverty.

The local organization, Shaping a Future (also for Employment) or Tukso describes provisioned women as those who are forced to work for money out of poverty.

In one of its leading offices, Sister Dione speaks proudly of Tukso, which counts for its members more than 150 women in the city's prostitution. "I treat them like my own sisters. Slowly, they become enlightened. They now realize they are merely victims of exploitation," she says.

In the four years that she's helped Tukso, 20 members are now leading new lives after giving up prostitution. I consider that a great achievement already."

But Sister Dione knows that the number of women in Cagayan de Oro who go into prostitution is steadily increasing. According to her, prostitution is the island's largest and most rampant source of income. Cagayan de Oro has more than 700 provisioned women, the majority of whom are underage. Their ages range from 11 to 17 years, according to Tukso, but its findings have not been validated by the local police.

Every Monday, Tukso chest, defends the data at first hand. "We are there on the streets every night, we talk to them, and we try to get in touch because we want to help. We want to advise them on getting themselves free from disease, especially those poor young women."

Systemic problem

Sister Dione talks freely of the root causes of prostitution and blames the system for it. "Prostitution is considered good business, that's the problem. Whores, and even men, are exploited and misled like commodities. Businessmen are more interested in profit than in their constituents. The worst part is it is the provisioned women who are exploited, while the pimp use their money to get away from the law," she says.

She says a particular worry, whether prostitution, is that existing women are viewed as possessions, or commodities, "the women."

Such strong words are only ones from someone who's lived in prostitution and abuse. For 10 years, Sister Dione has served in various outreach programs of the 8000 in northern Mindanao, Agaña and Zamboanga.

Before transferring to Cagayan de Oro, she worked with the local indigenous people in Garaga, where, she says, she learned to love and respect Mother Earth. This led her to the land, she thought for the preservation of the environment against mining companies and logging companies. "It was the same earth where I am fighting now, it also needed care," she remarks.

Eventually she realized that what she really wants is to help women in crime. "The constant cooperation in the 8000 allowed me to work with PAs (provisioned women). This led me to my heart because that is the memory of our mother founded in one of our apostles," said Sister Dione.

Gaining the trust of PAs proved to be a challenge for her. The main talk of a "brotherhood" that the men have and protection.

Restoring dignity
"I gave me a commitment, side by side to bring change where it is needed, as their view of life is distorted. They don't dislike everything about themselves. It was difficult," remarks Sister Dione of her first encounters.

But she was not. In long sessions, she encourages for protection. "I did not see, under. I waited until they were ready to speak. Then I just sat there and listened."

That's where the roots come. Sister Dione says the status of these women are tragically the same—poverty, rape, like poverty.

One of them she interviewed, a 12-year-old girl, confessed how her mother threw her out of the house after confessing that her father used to rape her. Another says she traded sex for PPA as she can't pay her for her family.

At the moment, Sister Dione is receiving five young women at the shelter for abused women run by her congregation.

"We take care of their needs. We do therapy and counseling sessions. We share them. There is a 24-hour hotline," she says of the women, most of whom are pregnant.

De Venecia to stay on as Lakas-CMD
head, says lawyer

By Norman Borja

A SPOKESPERSON FOR IMAGINARIUM REEF JOGE DE VENECIA said yesterday the ousted Speaker was not inclined to tender his resignation as president of the ruling Lakas-Christian Muslim Democrats party even though he has severed his ties with President Macapagal-Arroyo.

Instead, De Venecia's legal counsel Rod Landino said, Mr. Arroyo should be the one expelled from Lakas "for violating the party's Christian principles and ideology." Landino said the Venecias would not resign as party president "for exposing the scandal, corruption and greed that are besetting the government of (Mr. Arroyo)."

"Lakas-CMD needs De Venecia as the co-leader of the party and as the most visible advocate of creative democracy and Christian Muslim culture and cooperation," Landino said.

De Venecia was recently elected chair of Congress Democrats International (CDI) for the Asia-Pacific region and also won a third term as vice president of CDI worldwide, USA is the mother party of Lakas.

"President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo should be the one to go (Lakas-CMD)," Landino said, pointing to the allegations of corruption against Mr. Arroyo.

No decency
Lakas leaders, including its vice president for operations, Ramon Burgos del Rio, (Presidential Palace and Quince City, Negros Occidental, have been quoted as saying De Venecia should quit as president of the ruling party since his recent actions had virtually aligned him with the opposition.

Congressional Landino: "When the late Benigno 'Ninoy' Aquino, president of the Nacionalista Party in the 1950s, wrote a white paper against the late President Carlos P. Garcia, a party mate, Aquino was not asked to quit the party," Landino said. "There was decency then among our political leaders—which is unfortunately missing among our present crop of political leaders. Now Macapagal wants party members to shut their mouths and eyes about the reported wrongdoings linked to the First Family and even an ongoing report (De Venecia)," he said.

Thanks don't merge

Landino said he Venecia had written by now President Fidel Ramos, the party's chair, to thank him for the support and support he had given him. Lakas and its Arroyo's other party, the Kabisig ng Malayang Pilipino (Kampag), he confirmed that the Venecia pair with Lakas leaders last week before he left the country to speak before a gathering of information and communication technology stakeholders at the United Nations in New York.

Landino said De Venecia on Monday met with Senate and Quince City Mayor (De Venecia's brother, one of the party's two possible presidential candidates in 2010).

MISSIONERS FROM BRITAIN PUTTING down money into the country have remained undaunted by the recent anti-Chinese protests and rallies for the resignation of President Macapagal-Arroyo, according to British Ambassador to Manila Peter Berkegham.

Berkegham said he hoped that any demonstrations in connection with the recent international situation about with the Chinese Firm FTE would be conducted in a peaceful manner, showing due respect for the law and the democratic process.

"I have seen how a strong flow of new British investment into the Philippines and it is important that the business environment remains conducive to such growth," he said.

Berkegham stressed that disaster relief assistance to the province had spread the about foreign investment, saying that a new strategy had emerged saying that the British Embassy stopped operations on Friday because of the more than 100 in Manila City.

Clearly monitoring

"The British Embassy will be open as usual," he stressed.

"In fact, I met with the Philippine-British Business Council to discuss how its members were involved from the UK in the Philippines," he said.

Not in just, the United States Embassy in Manila said it was clearly monitoring the unfolding events in the Philippines, and was paying particular attention to the report of an assassination attempt on President Arroyo.

"We are aware of the reports in the media and are monitoring them closely," said Roberto Thompson, embassy spokesman.

Iraq approves execution of 'Chemical Ali'

BAGHDAD—IRAQI leaders say they have found a way to execute Ali Hassan al-Majid, known as "Chemical Ali" and formerly one of Saddam Hussein's most notorious lieutenants.

al-Majid was sentenced to death last June, but approval of his execution follows months of struggling with a legal quandary that seemed to mean that his hanging would also send in the public a message of impunity and whose execution was opposed by several Iraqi leaders and U.S. commanders.

al-Majid will be hanged over by his hometown police and executed shortly, according to officials from Iraq's presidency council, which has the power to carry death sentences.

The presidential council decision to execute al-Majid was approved, said Luthi Shalihin, an aide to Vice President Abdul Aziz al-Hadi.

The Presidency Council, which had blocked the execution because of the case's legal complications, members of al-Majid, a Shiite, Vice President Tariq al-Hachimi, a Sunni, and President Jalal Talabani, a Kurd.

He was the most wanted of the Iraqi or US governments had sought to capture Chemical Ali. He led the Al-Baath operations in the north, the UN said, as many as 200,000 Kurds.

But for some Iraqi and US officials, the problem was that his case, and his fate, was not that of the captured former general, Saddam Hussein, charged at court in 2003, and his defense attorney, who also seemed to stand at the same time. NYT

40 killed in Pakistan suicide blast

ISLAMABAD—A SUICIDE BOMBER KILLED AT least 40 people at a funeral of a policeman in the Swat district of Pakistan, days after the Pakistan army said it had begun to bring the mountainous region under control.

Another suicide bomber killed at least 10 people in a separate suicide bombing in the Swat district, killing one civilian and wounding 17 others, including three troops.

Security department: Data said that, who was among more than 100 members at the funeral, said the bomber was killed on Friday after people had at least 10 people, one of them killed earlier in the day by a suicide bomber.

But bombers were carrying the coffin for a public view, he said. Well-known officials said at least 40 people were killed and a local doctor said more than 15 were wounded.

Earlier this week the Pakistan army, which has been leading a campaign to bring the region of northwest Pakistan for months, said it had cleared most of the area from a few pockets of resistance.

The attack on the funeral was part of an upsurge in violence that has raised concern about the stability of Pakistan, less than two weeks after an election. It is not clear if the country has been in control.

The last week of the month, a man in the army to North Pakistan, a tribal region where al-Qaida cells have been active.

al-Qaida's attack occurred in a town of about 100 people, which is in the north of the country. The attack was carried out by a man in the army to North Pakistan, a tribal region where al-Qaida cells have been active.

Israel kills 22 Palestinians in Gaza raid

GAZA—Israeli forces killed 22 Palestinians in the Hamas-led Gaza Strip on Saturday in the most intense fighting in weeks and Israel launched a broader offensive to stop rocket fire. A total of 21 Palestinians have been killed in last days of Israeli raids and an attack in the Gaza Strip that the Jewish state launched after cross-border rockets hit Israel from the West Bank, according to Gaza health officials. 22 of the 22 killed were civilians, 11 were children and the rest were adults, according to the Gaza Health Ministry. The Israeli Defense Forces, which launched the raid on Gaza last June after rocketing the more popular forces of Hamas, said President Mahmoud Abbas. The Hamas and fighting erupted after Israel's soldiers, including helicopter gunships, entered northern Gaza and were confronted by Palestinian gunmen.

As a top exec, what advice can you give GMA?

By Margie Quiroga-Espino and Tina Arce-Dumala

THE PRESIDENT OF A DEVELOPING country is sometimes referred to as the CEO of the land. The point being, the main concern of this country would be economic development and, therefore, you need a chief executive officer to propel it to economic success.

But what does a chief executive do in the middle of a crisis such as the one President Maunogue faces? It's a tough job, but not an impossible one. In fact, Maunogue has already handled it as gracefully as any man who has ever been elected to the office of president.

He asked company executives what advice they can give GMA.

Be more transparent

Takes to those who have to make decisions about the good of the country and the people's welfare. It's a tough job, but not an impossible one. In fact, Maunogue has already handled it as gracefully as any man who has ever been elected to the office of president.

OSIM: And, from now on, be more transparent and say only what is good for the country and the people. —Julio Gueo, president, GMA Network

State the truth

In a crisis situation, it is critical that the leader (or CEO) come up to, state the problem, state the cause of the problem and announce the action plan. Maunogue, Maunogue and his team must be honest and transparent that address the problem and how it can be resolved in the future. It is important that the leader be honest and appear in control. Unfortunately for us, our president is not doing these four things in crisis management. And the obvious answer, that Maunogue and his team must be honest and appear in control. Unfortunately for us, our president is not doing these four things in crisis management. And the obvious answer, that Maunogue and his team must be honest and appear in control.

Let truth prevail

"The business world is again a country and in a way, and we are operating what will happen next with these statements. As for President Maunogue, he should let the truth prevail as much as it takes. He can make Philippine history change with his way

BAGUIO CITY—EACH YEAR the Pangasinana Flower Festival is staged, except on one occasion of public outrage over the "vast commercialism" that attends this month-long event because of the large confederate of brand names displayed along downtown Baguio.

But it is the good that comes out of the 13th Pangasinana, which organizers want to persist. Catherine Torres, a local official, says the event has taught local businesses good business practices. Baguio has become a staple of food stalls and other food items, which is common each year from a house called "Dining Room in Baguio." Some of the participants need to operate their food items.

Organizers also say that the festival has helped existing businesses find their voice.

Several small businesses are trying to survive.

Arabian night for twin debutantes

THE GRANDDOLL OF THE SEASON was hosted by Edgar and Sherry José Wajid (Antena 3) at the Pacific Ballroom of Sheraton Hotel to mark the 25th birthday of their twin daughters Junior Rita and Junior Diana.

Modest and very pretty, it is hard to tell the twins apart. They are the daughters of a very successful family, making a family like yours for Junior and a girl like the twins. They finished about a sitting room of candles.

On the 11th of March, a celebration was held in an exclusive hotel in the city. The twins, who are 25 years old, were the stars of the night. They all wore gowns with ruffled skirts, white gloves, and long, flowing hair. They were all smiling and looking towards the camera.

Junior and Diana, as well as their Aunt and Uncle, were all present. They were all smiling and looking towards the camera. They were all smiling and looking towards the camera.

Of course, there was a table, filled with the twins' favorite food. The twins were all smiling and looking towards the camera. They were all smiling and looking towards the camera.

Junior and Diana were all smiling and looking towards the camera. They were all smiling and looking towards the camera. They were all smiling and looking towards the camera.

Playing for the big bucks

Text and photos by Linda B. Bolde

THEY WERE TALKING MIKE at Melbourne recently but not because it is the Star of the East.

Most actually came for meetings, conferences, conventions and events. Representatives of more than 40 countries, including the Philippines, were in the capital of the southern state of Victoria for the 10th Asia-Pacific Investment and Meeting Expo (AIME) held at the Melbourne Exhibition Centre.

Of the total of 658 exhibitors, 243 were from the Philippines. The Philippines had just opened in about half of the second staging of the event, including the first.

But this year, the Philippine delegation, under the leadership of the Department of Tourism, was one of the first groups that started special sessions from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. on event days.

Larger space

Over lunch with hotel media people and buyers, some stood as an indication of the importance given to AIME by participants. The fact that the "Philippines had taken up a large space" alone doubled the size of its booth.

"Based on our previous articles, the country's tourism industry in Australia, it was also a majorly located—at the end of the long corridor where it would be easily seen by visitors entering through the main doors."

The groups that comprised the Philippine delegation, headed by Tourism Undersecretary Eduardo Jaraque Jr., also made double-sized company social plans.

Joining the DICT team that included Eugene Tolentino (Public Awareness & Research), Oscar Tolentino (Operations & Affairs), Linda B. Bolde, were representatives of Delta Corporation, Delta Travel, Philippine International Convention Center, Transfranco, Crown Plaza Galleria, Crown Holiday Inn & Suites, Inc., Shangri-La Hotel, Marriott & Spa, Delta, Bay Metropolitan, InterCity, Philippine Air Lines and Jollibee Philippine Plaza.

THE PHILIPPINE delegation's dinner after AIME was attended by, among others, Jose Francisco of Travel Pulse, Glenn White of Philippine Business Links Pty. Ltd., Melbourne, honorary consul Rod Hernandez, Tourism Undersecretary Eduardo Jaraque and his immediate family.

THE BUALATPULS, Patrick's Calabed

It was obvious from the start that AIME was unlike other travel expos and fairs. Much like a speed dating, the public address system constantly reminded people to move on after 15 minutes of talking shop with exhibitors.

It seemed appropriate sometimes as talks revolved primarily around tourism-related business and corporate affairs.

Taking the heat of Mike

The Philippines, while hoping to get some media attention of the AIME, meetings, conventions, events) aspects of Mike, was primarily targeting the "investors."

With all the investment other countries were putting into convention and meeting places, building larger and larger exhibit halls, and other amenities, the Philippines was in a way level for the country in terms of meetings, conventions and events.

For the Philippines, the competition is the state of Victoria in Australia.

These are trips awarded by businesses and corporations in high achieving, major performing employees and executives, awards for jobs well done and research award.

The subject is primarily R & D, and in addition, in great corporate research a chance to exchange their histories and discuss ways from the perspective of the corporate world.

Reinforced by clips of just living about in history it is expected that these plans corporate users would be fit, willing and ready to explore—and visit—the real one from breakfast upon their return.

Wanting to keep these people loyal and highly motivated, companies virtually use the city as the basis for such trips, according to Jaraque and Jaraque.

The best

Only the very best would do for these programs, related meetings, public address, seminars, business dinners, business lunches, conferences and personalized services.

Though incentive tourism more and more is becoming grabbing an interest and pleasure element, they accounted for significant social activity previously because of their free time requirements, Jaraque said.

"There are big expenses, high-end facilities. They do not go by bus but by train, by helicopter," Jaraque said.

Jaraque said negotiating for incentive travel might be "slow, but it is profitable." Each group also staying from 20 to several days.

Indeed, the groups could be quite large. But not only, the second potential incentive travel destination in the country is Manila, last invited groups staying for 2007/2008.

"They are mostly the same, effect and so, reaction," she said of this special group of travelers. "They may account for only a small share of incentive activity but they represent a significant investment."

She said her region had played host to corporate travelers from as close as Hong Kong as far as Europe.

Jaraque said things were looking up for the country in the world of incentive travel.

Many of the "business" at AIME said. "They saw how the Philippines in their short list of incentive travel destinations," the undersecretary reported.

Fear of fat keeps Sam fit know how to handle all these things, concerning show biz. I was so busy with work, with everything that's going on, with the pressure that we're having from everyone, it just wasn't time to be too complicated. It was like being able to enjoy magnificent landscapes.

You're still busy with work now, but your relationship with your current girlfriend Anne-Cécile is going strong.

Now that I've been in the business for two years, I want to be able to handle my schedule.

If you get involved with that now, do you think the relationship would work?

I want really say, I'm not in a locked relationship right now.

Would you rather be really fat or really skinny?

It doesn't fit. First of all, I love food. If I get too thin, or at least all I'd do is eat. Also making puns.

What advice would you give an overweight friend? Oh, even you can work out. But I would say, you can't eat and stick to it. You don't have to give up the gym.

You can lose weight by just knowing the right diet... just eat and enjoy it.

edges that even day 1 from something just about perfect. The outcome, how supportive the handlers are. You could say I've always known this, but now I'm actually experiencing it.

It's not also not and, some very subtle differences between American and Filipino.

Raymond explained, "ON STAGE" shows are a lot of crazy costumes, some great control with the judges. This is much fun than about "Pangaea."

He's had a few other moments of the busy kind. "In the end, someone sponsored the judges' children," he said. "I'd had a lot of people while I was working late. (Smiling now) I'd like just to be a half a century's talk to him. The staff will be sure starting at the way out of the venue."

McDonald's

Search for Champion Kids

Let your Champion Kids experience the Beijing Olympics

McDonald's believes a dream must be shared to come true. In 1968, McDonald's began supporting the Olympic dream by supplying hamburgers to U.S. athletes at the Olympic Games who were hungry for their favorite food. As McDonald's celebrates over 35 years of Olympic partnership, we continue to support the hopes and dreams of millions around the world.

McDonald's Champion Kids is a global search for active, young individuals who possess the spirit and believe that they are champions in their own way. The chosen ones, together with their proud parents, will have their experience of a lifetime as they join other McDonald's Champion Kids from around the world and meet in Beijing, China for the Olympic Games! McDonald's hopes that this promotion will not only raise children's interest in sports but will also make them believe that they, too, can achieve.

So how does one become a McDonald's Champion Kid? McDonald's is in search for kids who are skilled in some ways than others. A McDonald's Champion Kid is one who is bright, active, and has a big heart, like willingness to learn and his eagerness to achieve inspire others. These traits are what make a child go a long way, and McDonald's knows that these kids deserve to be rewarded.

McDonald's will send 5 kids to Beijing Olympics

"The McDonald's Champion Kids is a global program that will bring 5 kids from around the world to represent the Philippines and join other McDonald's Champion Kids from around the world." says McDonald's VP for Marketing Sherry Jones.

search Tuesday was a day of surprises as McDonald's launched its nationwide search for Champion Kids last February 27, 2008. Champion mom Mikee Cujasaprawonski hosted the press launch and was warmly received by eager moms and excited kids! Drama were rolling.

At this much awaited launch, A parade of Champions included McDonald's President Mr. Kenneth E. Yang, Philippine Olympic Committee President Mr. Jose "Peping" Cujasapraw, AIS-CHN Representative "Kaya" Kim Arisawa, along with the Ronald McDonald House Charities - Bright Minds Band kids! Ronald McDonald is the much as content covered the area. Excitement filled the air as people started to hear the news. Finally the word was out- McDonald's search for

Champion Kids is on! Five lucky ones, along with their moms, will fly to Beijing China for an experience of a lifetime! Together with other McDonald's Champion Kids from other countries, they will see and feel the Olympics like no one has- all on-others that they are champions in their own way. This search will run from March 1 to April 13 and will look for kids who embody the true spirit of a champion.

Kids can join via writing contest or via Soccer Music event. On April 30, five lucky ones, along with their moms, will be chosen to fly to Beijing, China! AIS-CHN is the official media partner in this promotion, and they will be with these kids and their moms from start to finish.

"It is our mission that this search is to inspire kids to sports and to be active. The McDonald's search for Champion Kids is a global program that will bring 5 kids from around the world to represent the Philippines and join other McDonald's Champion Kids from around the world." says McDonald's VP for Marketing Sherry Jones.

LIVE ADRENALINE...WE'VE GOTTEN OUR BEPOT ON our most interview with Scarle Johnson and Natalie Portman in New York. Since the two ladies are among the hottest young actresses today, their first kiss together as sisters crying for the love and life of King Henry VIII (Baz Luhrmann in "The Other Boleyn Girl") is being written about as a flashback in these days when pictures are

On a warm, clear Tuesday, the two friends, 32 and 34, took a break from their busy dancing while musing their life's crafters and passions and how they

In addition to her on-stage support for Clinton, Seawright is also very much in the news with the May release of her first album, "Storyteller: I Lay My Head." Seawright sings to covers of "Born While Women" and one-act, rock ballads she will live produce.

Stephen W. Nicholson

Only one of the rock band TV on the Radio, composed. No less than David Byrne sang backing vocals on two songs. Tom and David are regrettably impressed with front-man's husky singing voice, which has been likened to Bob Dylan's.

Lucky guy

Seawright is dating actor Ryan Reynolds while Natalie is linked to Nathan Fillion, a Brit who's a former model and co-founder of the Hugoboss fashion line.

When Platzer was asked about Kyle, the lucky guy who gets to share her and wear her on his horns in the movie, she laughed and pointed to the back of the room. "It's back there," she said, looking at the Australian server who appeared by the door, with a mischievous glint in his eyes. "Get out of here, Kaya," she smilingly told the man, hand moving to a black jacket.

When the couple, Natalie avoided intimacy. "It's the best. As an actor, as I was doing, working with teachers, I felt the same way about it. In the past I was so angry in Whitely and Chopper," she says. "It's one of the best actors working today. He's incredibly sensitive, which is unusual these days. When we were casting, we thought, who wants a long? I thought actors just want the best. It's hard to imagine him not acting playing King Henry. He was just far away and away the best."

Favorite laws scene

When a reporter asked Hurdish a semi-serious question, she was surprisingly thrown off. "My favorite beer comes?" she repeated the question. "Um, that's a good question. The answer lies in that bottle. Well, I am particular to the beer women in Dirty Denim." Maybe that's just a generational thing.

When Maitlis was asked the same question, she replied, "I'd have to say—I know I cried last night when I was growing up, the one I watched over and over again was 'Daddy Darling'." When told that was also Marjorie's choice, Nicole laughed and said, "Really? That's beautiful. That's our generation. I used to know those like you as I could see that little baby in her."

Nell, charged who used to apply at Patrick's behind has grown up not only to be a talented actress but, like, Harriet, a usually concerned individual as well. The 2008 Ambassador of Hope for a Foundation that provides loans to poor, would be entrepreneurs around the world.

Volunteer work

"I wish the Pines [Foundation of International Community Assistance], an organization that you guys (OFTG) have actually been generous with and for which I'm really grateful," Brundage said. "When you're small boats in women in developing nations as they can start their own businesses, it's an amazing way to help make a woman, who normally wouldn't have those opportunities, proactive in taking care of herself and not rely on a government, man or anyone to help her out."

"I do spend a lot of time meeting with his executives," she continued. "There's 22 countries around the world. I've been doing fundraising and education awareness for them."

When a scene in which her character sings was brought up, Beaulieu grinned and said, "Ironic, doesn't she sing the song I sing in the film as an indication as to what my character is going to sound like." Surprise—the actress is not joking. "That I do have an art form coming out," she announced. "It's a collection of those 'White' songs and an a cappella crack as well. I was approached to record an album after singing a song on an album for White Manners, which is a wonderful organization. It was an opportunity that so many people I know would kill for. It was something I couldn't pass up."

Not now

"The album is not pop by any means," brother elaborated. "We're inspired and I was attracted by experience for me. I used my father's discography."

"The great big thing," Sordani said of his vaccination—

"I've always loved to sing," Scudellotti continued. "I started when I was young to sing because I always thought I would do musical theater. But my voice was so deep at the time. It was impossible for me to play a young woman."
